... there was a story of a place and events, and of people involved in the events of this place.

The time is now. . .

The place is here. . .

. . . in always

. . . in everywhere.

We, the characters, are as all people.

Kathy is here . . .

in everywhere.

As always . . .

in each of us.

KATHY GRANT

To the Class of 1970:

You are coming of age in the last year of a decade as we move into the 70's. The 50's had been preoccupied with recovering from a world war. To the 60's they seemed self-centered, too much concerned with material possessions. Your generation has been involved in a courageous protest and revolt against this "affluent society". As we turn to the future, what part are you going to play in making the next decade a really constructive one? The twentieth century seems headed for a disastrous end unless we make good use of the next years in re-creating life on this planet earth, making it a fit place for man to inhabit. This, as I see it, is the most important single focus you must have in the 70's.

How does this touch you? In many personal ways. First, it requires the consideration of your values and priorities. Is the possession of material goods first on your scale? Think of the baby seals, the great zebras, lions and leopards of Africa. Why are they disappearing? Because of the greed and careless affluence of our rich citizens. Why have song birds gone from our gardens? One has to choose between painfully picking the bugs and beetles off crops and gardens or using the current chemical magic which in the cycle of life poisons birds and other forms of life, upsetting the fundamental balance of nature. As citizens it is our duty to control the "plunder of the planet" taking place through the wanton exploitation of natural resources.

Does quality in your material possessions matter? Are you always looking for "new models" and trying to keep up with others? Vast auto graveyards ruin the beauty of our countryside because quality in manufactured products is not insisted upon. Obsolescence is accepted as a principle.

In the past ten years your generation has outwardly tried to be "different", a sincere stance in some cases; in others merely a desire to follow the crowd. Many good results have come from your criticism of American life. You have promoted far greater understanding and sensitivity to the human situation of people all over the globe.

Now the challenge to each of you individually is to focus your college education and your adult life in deeds as well as in words on some of the values for which in the past few years you have said you stood. This requires true self-discipline and self-restraint. It must be based on a reassessment of your personal ideas of what makes life worth living not only for yourself but for others. More than ever before we must put the well-being of others before our own. We must each be highly sensitive to how it would feel to be the other person.

They say that computers will soon be ready to take over many of the dull jobs of life. However, the resulting increase of leisure means that more workers, both paid and volunteer, will be needed to show people how to use all this free time. Here is a vast and undeveloped field in which each of you can work with imagination and resourcefulness. Man and his intellectual capacities are dulled by passive entertainment. Adult education, like education for children, has to involve the person, making him grow in his capacity for pursuing a satisfying way of life because he appreciates its possibilities, its essential quality.

You will be meeting a great challenge. As a generation you are ready to look at human problems in a more universal way and have the courage to move in new directions. To have an effective part in these next years I believe you will need to renew yourselves spiritually, rethink your values accordingly, develop your own capabilities. These plus personal self-discipline will be the first steps toward enabling you to do your share in meeting the needs of this evolving human society.

My hope is that each member of the Class of 1970 will do this. In your doing so lies the hope of the world.

FACHTU

DIRECTORS OF STUDIES

"What have you been thinking about colleges?"
— Miss Cross

"I really wouldn't worry about it."
— Mrs. Neale

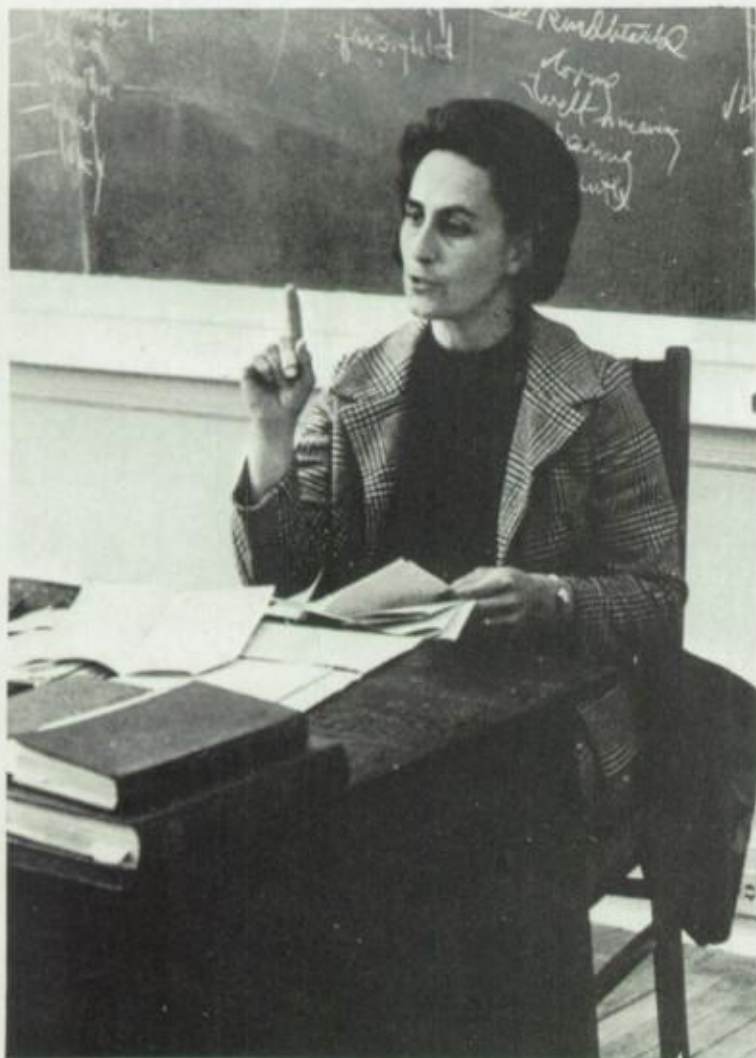

"It would be impossible to make out a schedule that would please everyone."
— Miss Levering

"The study hall desks will have to be cleaned out by recess."
— Mrs. Loucheim

ENGLISH

Now, let me get this straight . . .
— Mrs. Balant

And today's word, which you all know . . .
— Miss Cox

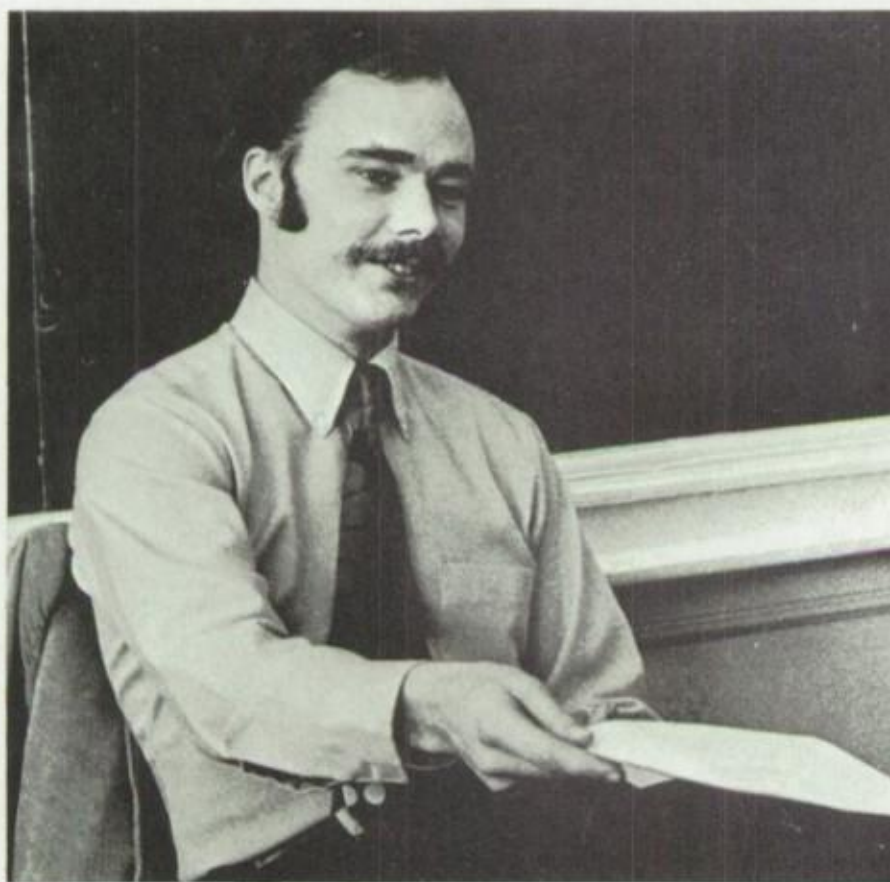

This paper needs more stuff.
— Miss Wilson

Only the more rugged mortals should attempt to keep up with current literature.
— George Hade

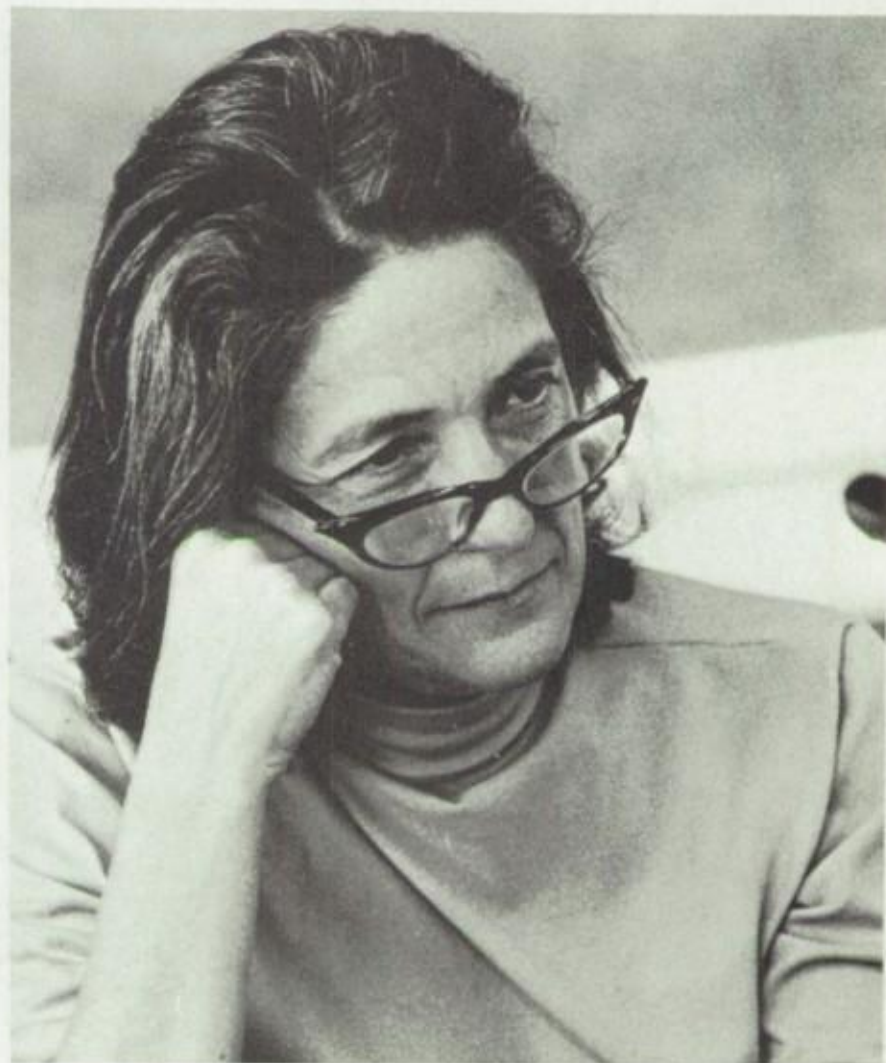

Do you really think that?
— Mrs. Leavitt

This conclusion is a gross cop-out.
— Mr. Kuhn

Just because he's super-human he thinks he's God.
— Mrs. Whitting

I don't think so ... Well, maybe ...
okay.
— Mrs. Cope

I don't know, myself, what do you think?
— Mrs. Satterthwaite

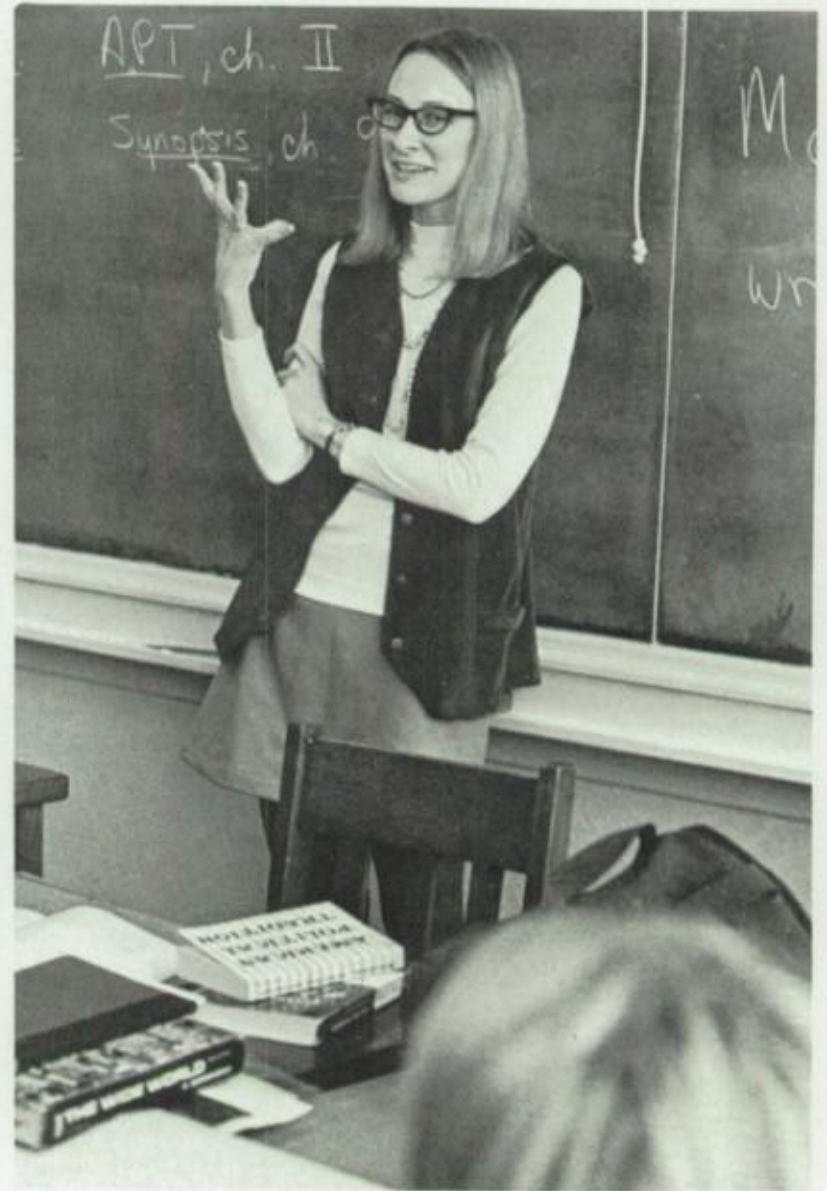

HISTORY

That picture in my wallet is worth 10,000 words.
— Mrs. Morris

— Mrs. Mayall

And that reminds me . . .
— Miss Stone

History, a distillation of rumor.
— Thomas Carlyle

You know, it's a fascinating story.
— Mrs. Neale

Anyway ...
— Mrs. Bisgaier

... please let me finish my lesson, girls, or else I'll go home very frustrated and I'll have to finish the rest of my lesson to my poor friend.
— Miss Pugh

I'm a political scientist, not a historian.
— Mrs. Loucheim

I have hardly ever known a mathematician who was capable of reasoning.

— Plato

As you continue in your study of math, you will find it more and more powerful.

— Mrs. Ely

MATHEMATICS

And, as you can easily see . . .
— Mrs. Shoemaker

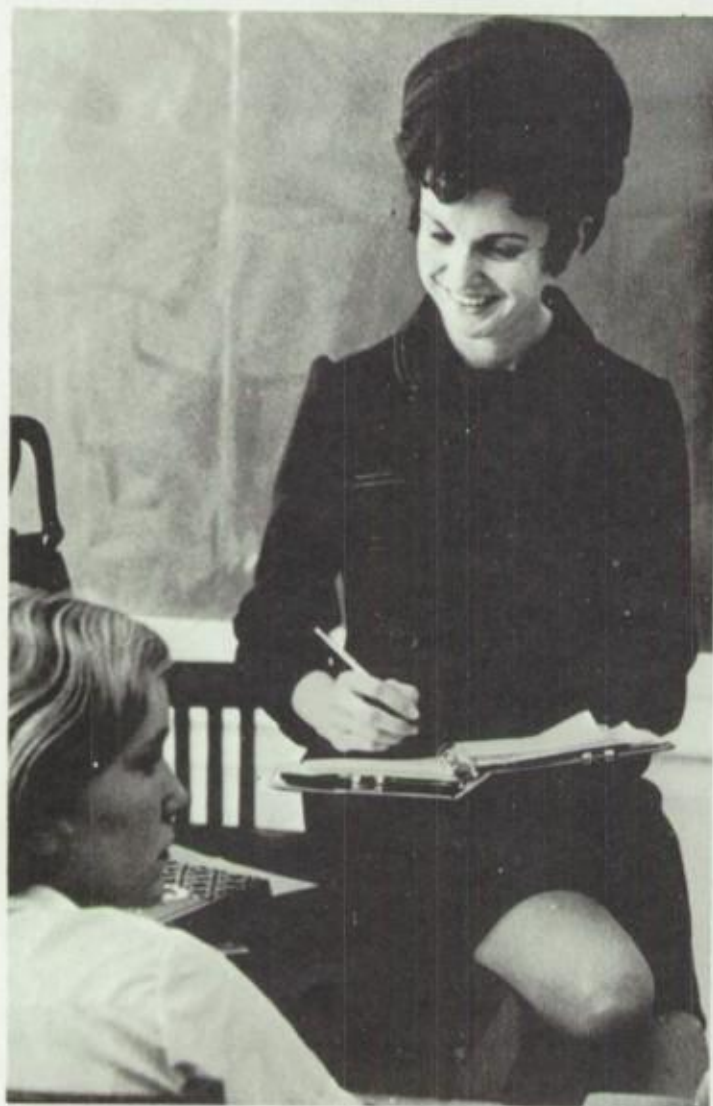

. . . for all practical purposes.
— Mrs. Matthews

I'll go home and ask my daughters.
— Mrs. Royer

Now, girls, this is easy, even my dog can do it.
— Mr. Snyder

O.K., everybody to the board . . .
— Mrs. Johnson

— Mrs. Austin

SCIENCE

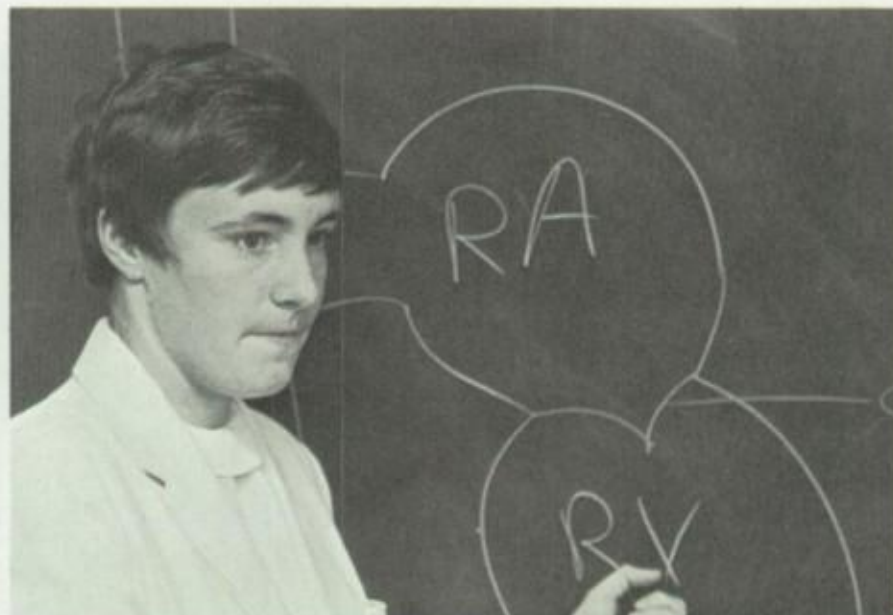

Science is always wrong.
It never solves a problem without creating ten more.
— G. B. Shaw

Now, here is your exam — I mean test — I mean quiz.
— Mrs. Levan

How do you count atomic particles?
Sit up all night with a magnifying glass.
— Miss Cheston

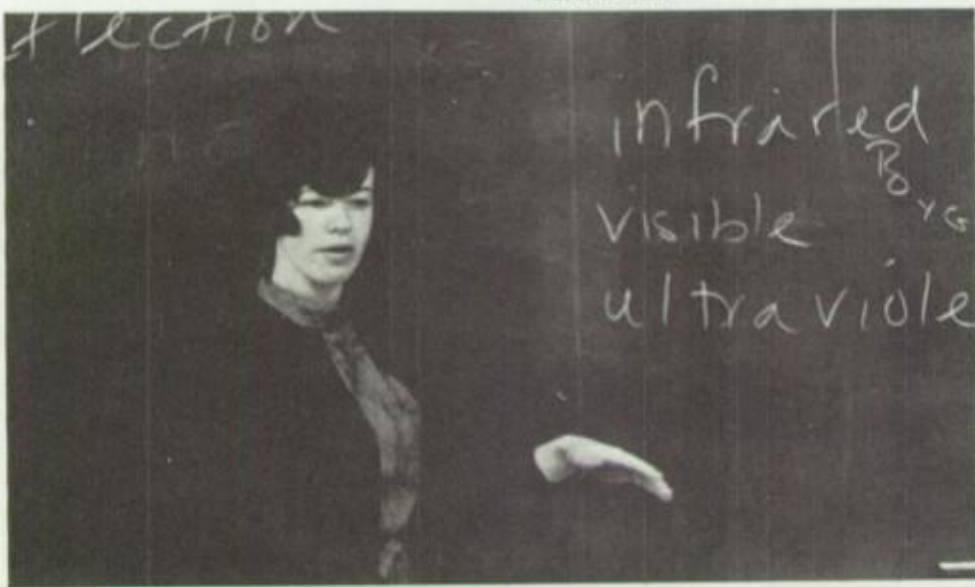

O.K.
— Miss Michele

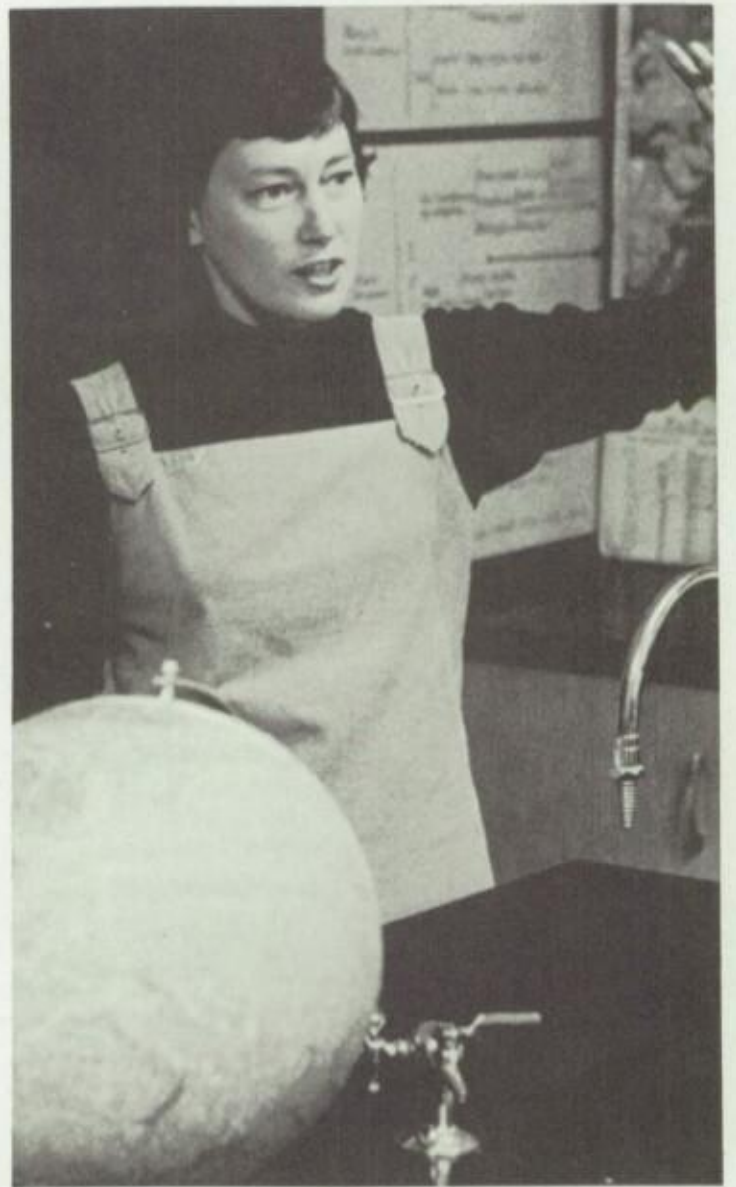

Let's not have a full scale panic going here.
— Mrs. Dahl

— Mrs. Miller

Well, sometimes it works, and sometimes it doesn't at all.
— Mrs. Chesick

— Mrs. Turner

Spanish is the language for lovers,
French for diplomats, German for horses,
and English for geese.

"I know this is hard to say, but I don't speak English very well either."

— Mme. Massiah

"Gutentag, Liebe Kinder."

— Frau Mautner

"Auf Duetsch, young ladies."

— Frau Losconcy

ART

Art, like morality, consists in drawing the line somewhere.
— G. K. Chesterton

Before we get down to work, I just want to talk about a few things.
— Mrs. Fackenthal

So glad you could make it.
— Miss Myers

What's that you're doing there?
— Mrs. Webb

— Mrs. Leshnoff

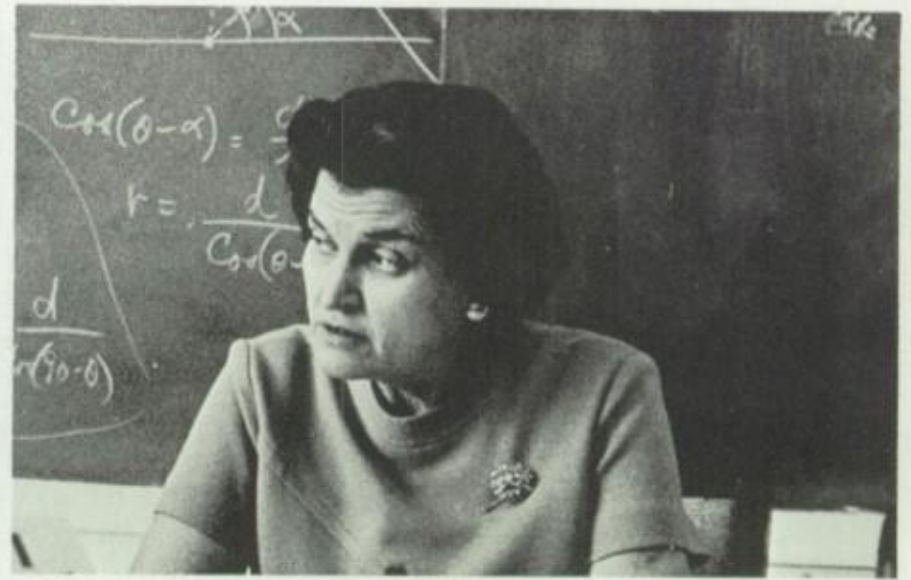

— Mrs. French

CLASSICS

"The Romans would never have found time to conquer the world if they had been obliged to learn Latin."

Heinrich Heine

"Why, didn't I tell you about that?"
— Mrs. Gamble

Miss Morris

"It cannot be put into words like other objects of knowledge you spend much time with it, you live in the pursuit of it; and then suddenly, like a flame kindled from a leaping fire, it comes to life in your soul and thereafter nourishes itself."

— Plato

Mrs. Whitting

"Now let's get back to work."
— Mrs. Budd

"Philosophy is worthless."
— Miss Pavlock

This wraps her up in a nut shell - Madame

"All right, you may go now."

LYNN WILLIAMS

A man though wise, should never be ashamed of learning more,
and must unbend his mind.
When a man ceases to want to learn, he ceases to be.

NANCY MOFFIT

Till by faith, I met Him face to face and I felt the wonder of His grace, then I knew that He was more than just a God who didn't care who lived away out there.
Now He walks beside me day-by-day ever watching o'er me lest I stray, helping me to find that narrow way.
He's everthing to me.

MARSHA SAYLOR

Once I had a downy swan
She was so very frail.
She sat upon an oyster shell
And hatched me out a snail.
The snail it changed into a bird
The bird to butterfly.
And he who tells a bigger tale
Would have to tell a lie.

SHELLEY KANISS

I am forever walking upon these shores,
Betwixt the sand and foam
The high tide will erase my footprints,
And the wind will blow away the foam,
But the sea and the shore will remain
Forever.

DOLA DAVIS

LISA ECKHART

But how can I reveal to you, and you,
My real self's hidden and unlovely hue?
How can I undeceive, how end despair
Of this intolerable make-believe?

CAROL MIKITA

Love that is cleansed by tears will remain eternally pure and beautiful.

ISABEL RAMPELLO

Each man's life represents an attempt at such a road,
the intimation of a path

EMILY PENMAN

You thought the leaden winter
Would bring you down forever
But you rode upon the steamer
To the violence of the sun.

LESLIE DUNN

My dear fellow,
it isn't easy to be anything nowadays. There's such a lot of beastly competition about.

MAUREEN WHITE

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I —
I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference.

MARJORIE MUN TAK YANG

In the beginning, God said,
 "Let $E = mc^2$ "
 and there was light.

KATHARINE EMERSON PARSONS

"There is pleasure, sure, in being mad,

KATHY FLEMING

You've been so long at the beach
You even taste like the sun
But the sun is much too warm even for love.

I mean — I want you
But night is only inches away and I can wait.

Meanwhile
Watch the idolent butterfly playing on the tall flower
In the yard
And think about the sun's going down.
I always does, you know.

The beach was barren.
Quietly the waves crept in
And even slower they returned.
The sun shone.

Wanderer, your footprints are in the sand.
But they, like you, do not remain long.
Where, Oh God, does the beach end?
Where does the sand turn to cement?

ANN MCCLENAHAN

I am a Bear of very Little Brain, and long words bother me.

DIANA WOOD

Know you what it is to be a child;
it is to have a spirit yet streaming from the water's baptism; it is to believe in love, to believe in loveliness, it is to believe in belief; it is to be so little that the elves can reach to whisper in your ear, it is to turn pumpkins into coaches, and mice into horses, loneliness into loftiness, and nothing into everything; for each child has its fairy godmother in its soul.

POLLY TURNER

Keep yourself warm
When the pools are freezing,
Here, at the bottom of the sky,

When the sky is thin, and does not hold
And the soul is set free.

I do hope you become what you want to be. You'll be happy then, I know! Freedom, remember, is not what you can't do, but rather what you have the ability to do - but, here again, what am I giving you a lecture for (?) - that's a switch, huh?

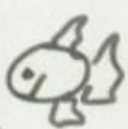

Take care of yourself next year, Maureen. I sincerely hope that you will be happy - you can MAKE yourself happy, you know. Anyway, all princesses are happy, right? Someday soon, I'll probably receive a note from you, telling me that your prince has come and saved you.

And a couple ~~years~~ from now, your children will be old enough to replace through this year book + read this passage full of bull.

I do want so badly to see you in the future, though it never will be the same - and you, my closest friend!! But as you keep on trying to tell me - all this sentimentality is schmata - head shit. I guess it's bad to cling onto the past.

But, part of you is inside me, now and no body can take that away. And furthermore, I love you.
